

Believers

They boast, “I am saved”, but then reach out in their utmost faith to resuscitate their yet-worshipful government god.

They boast that they trust in God, but then wail in defeat for their fallen “neutral” politicians.

They boast that they are believers, but they don’t ‘believe’ that the Bible has the answers they need outside the church.

They cry that they can’t understand why God won’t show them how to fix all this, while their Bibles are left buried under stacks of documents and law books.

They cry that they want someone to save them, but they keep sending unbiblical men to help bolster an unbiblical document in an unbiblical government system and wonder why this struggle to “defeat evil” isn’t working.

Here’s the complicated part that they may have never been told to then include in their thinking processes:

YHWH saves.

Oh, and they brag that they “really believe in God”, but also say that those of us who take the Bible more seriously are being “unrealistic”.
What do you think?

We’ve found exciting new hope for those who really believe their Creator!
