

Can you call for a “Revival” without humbly seeking repentance and reform first? —Is that not like asking God to put icing on a cake that isn’t there?

I am very saddened in my heart that so many churches have been lulled into the religious fairy-tale land that they are all fallen to. So many of these groups of people don’t even understand some of the most basic logistics of the Almighty’s building blocks for a true congregation of believers. And this is of course due to many contributing factors, but mostly to the fact that satan and his pompous elite do not want the masses to know how to get back to being obedient to that Bible, and for centuries now, have successfully hidden the most important elements of that Bible from the world’s peasantry.

As often now happens in our apostate world, I have again heard from a few church leaders in town who are sadly of the impression that they can perhaps sugar coat a lot of their world’s problems by calling for a “revival”. A number of them have all united to call for a “revival” in our area, but they will surely soon thereafter wonder why their “revivals” are never taken seriously by the Father and/or by the more serious in town who seem to also deep down know why this “plan” for their church(es) is not bringing the results they would otherwise have hoped for. —they are being the most un-biblical in a humanist pragmatic sense, not understanding that what they are doing is working against the will of the One they are supposedly putting this “revival” together for.

It is this lack of understanding that these folks have that saddens me, as they are (for the most part) ignorantly following the same old formula that the watered-down evangelical church has trained them to follow, fitting-in with our modern age of instant TV dinners, etc, where one feels they needn’t do any of the old fashioned studying to get to their intended “blessings from God”. They would just rather hope to pop their prayers into some kind of spiritual microwave for a few minutes on “revival Sunday”, and hope that God will bless them with a church full of excited attendees that will put a big ol’ smiley face on their church for generations to come, etc.

They fail to see the fact that one is being arrogant towards YHWH when he or she simply seeks a revival, without first calling the ecclesia together to establish the proper road to study where it might be that they truly need genuine reform and repentance in their midst, which is definitely required before Father would ever consider rewarding a church with a genuine revival. But they sing and dance as if they deserve their revival blessing anyway, not knowing that their Jesuit-conditioned, contemporary method of “appeasing God” is not going to satisfy the angers of an otherwise absent God. They think that they can bring Him back to their midst bearing a cornucopia of blessings just by singing the right songs and praying the right prayers here and there, but the Bible says that Father seeks obedience and listening to Him above sacrifices and special services, etc. (see 1st Samuel 15:32)

These people are so steeped in their “cut to the chase” method of seeking YHWH’s favor, that its almost like a bunch of kinder-gardeners sitting in cardboard boxes pretending that they are all in expensive race cars driving for the finish line in some kind of grand prix race of some kind—they are so self-convinced of their imaginative ways of reaching their goal that their emotional result gives them a false sense of reality and achievement in their pumped up moments of singing, sharing testimonies, praying, etc, where I can’t help but feel that many of these people are only causing the Father to fold His arms in an even greater rage, seeing that they want to do everything but take the time to read His book and understand that they have lost sight of Him, and going so far into the past that they are on an entirely different path than the Bible teaches.

They run right to the revival part, just like a child might lick the icing off of a cake first, doing so without first solemnly seeking the Father’s true counsel and original instruction for their lives, sadly relying only on the television-instilled ways in which many of them were so erroneously taught to please their god by the global church system. They are in spiritual quicksand but haven't a clue that they are sinking deeper and deeper into the abyss of an eternal disconnect from the true God of the Bible, as the emotional highs that they drive themselves into 'feeling' are only as placebos that naturally would work well with folks who have never felt the real thing—meaning the REAL love and lordship of YHWH.

So on with their revival they go, singing and dancing and "praising the LORD" (or so they call it) when in all reality, they are only praising themselves and their own made up substitute ways in which they have decided to go about seeking this god for his mercies and blessings. The blessings are all they inwardly seek, and so the ability to want to truly please Him by obeying His true Word, thereby showing true worship for him, is left in the dust behind their cardboard grand prix cars in their quick-fix fury to reach the finish line of mortal wealth and happiness.

In the true revival days of the reformation, the people, led by the brave reformers of their time, first understood and had accepted that they had been hoodwinked for centuries by the Roman Catholic church into false ways that were in many ways blasphemous against God, but today we are too proud to admit that perhaps we too, have let our guard down and have let this again take place in the last five hundred years since then as well. "We are Americans!" some will proudly boast, "We are the world's beacon of Christian truth" others arrogantly think to themselves, but the fact of the matter is that America has lost its way so badly that even third world countries are instead being led to the Father and His wedding banquet in our stead, doing so the right way via repentance and reform. These newcomers haven't been so effectively television-trained to be so arrogant and prideful that they needn't do any changing in regards to their sin—these third world peoples are more grateful for such salvation and thereby accept that they had been failing the instruction of their Creator and wisely take the proper steps to show their gratitude, and unlike their American counterparts, humbly bow before their Great King, showing Him that they are willing that He should reign over them if they are to receive of His blessings. They recognize Him as both their Lord and Savior, both rescuer and lawgiver. But today's American "Churchianity" elite will sadly have to find out the hard way that they have been living the lukewarm life that will bring tragedy in their eternities. They will hear "depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matthew 7:23) when they too, find out that their decision that Christ "should not reign over them" is going to be a serious problem in that great day of YHWH. (See the parable surrounding Luke 19:27).

Today's professing Christians in America are so far behind the eight ball of pride that they think that they have the right to re-arrange the "old fashioned" rules of God to fit whatever best suits their own rules of spiritual happiness, thus technically creating their own adjusted religion consisting then of part biblical instruction and part human imagination, thereby creating more and more "denominational" religions left and right, via their own ever-changing commandments for their custom-built church.

So again... Revival without repentance and reform? Without first seeking genuine repentance and a true solemn reform of their church to YHWH's proper instruction for their lives my friends, the Father will never be in attendance to bless such a gathering, and all that will happen is an occasional satanically-designed kinder-garden grand prix pep rally at "team church", in the American town of "Willfully Ignorant, U.S.A.".

Want a REAL revival? Consider the more serious instructions behind this passage:

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." —2Chronicles 7:14

But the bulk of the world's churches do not have a love of the truth that they might be saved (2Thess 2:8-12) as a revival is not a "name it and claim it" treat, but rather a well-deserved reward from the Father for purifying one's church and land from iniquity. Today's children don't want to clean up their rooms, they just want the icing on the cake.
