

He's DARK AS NIGHT IN SHINING ARMOR

Is Glenn Beck a reliable source for those seeking truth?

Not at all! And here's why:

Having studied the likes of guys like Glenn Beck for many years in hoping to get to the bottom of what we were all being told by those such as Rush Limbaugh, Sean Hannity, and many others, and having even been acquainted with Jim Quinn and his partner Rose for a while, I couldn't help but see the dramatically shifting ways that they handled "news", before and after they became 'media superstars'.

Using Jim Quinn as my example here, I had listened to him from his early years as a local top 40 disc jockey here in Pittsburgh, and then on through the years in which he "found conservatism" following a scandalous harassment charge that was filed against him in the 1980's. At this juncture, he discarded his previously liberal stance, and was converted to conservatism. His own often-repeated line became: "A conservative is a liberal who's been mugged."

Well, this new conservative-looking attitude didn't have much righteousness attached to it, as a little over a decade later, I soon saw both he and his new partner Rose at events here and there, routinely denying many of the basic issues of God's authority, with Rose defending her Christian faith without it.

Quinn, being more elusive on the topic of his beliefs, would only offer (at best) simple generic diatribes of why the authority of God was only helpful in things like limiting government powers and so forth.

Having tried from time to time to shed a little light on them about the Father's "perfect law of liberty" at events here and there, at one point I instead began seeing disturbing changes in Mr. Quinn where it was clear that something was seriously wrong. Routine subjects like 'shadow governments', 'Able Danger', and more, disappeared from his shows, and were replaced by mockery for those who were calling-in about what really happened on 9-11. At this same time, he began prancing all over the airwaves speaking of his new Corvette, his new house, and soon thereafter, his new suddenly-syndicated radio show. This is where my own sad epiphany of talk radio ended, and I quickly realized that I now had to also investigate the investigators.

What I had soon discovered was that Quinn, just like others before him, had sold out. He had sold his loyal American listeners down the river for a hefty slice of the globalist pie. He's a traitor. And he's not the only one of course, but one of many!

Glenn Beck, in one-upping his trade's predecessors is not just one of the "good ol boys", but one of the very best at his craft. He is the most diabolical of them all. He's truly one of the New World Order's very best professional "disinformation specialists".

Allow me to illustrate (and remember, this is just an analogy):

Imagine an average sized middle-American town with the classic bank robbery taking place right in the heart of that town. Guns are blazing as crooks are exchanging fire with an outnumbered sheriff. They make their getaway, arms loaded with bags of money. A young man sees much of this and where the crooks were heading and threatens to squeal as to which way they were headed, etc., and instead of simply shooting this young man (due to realizing his popularity in town) reluctantly decide to throw him a small chunk of the take, in return that he does his best to keep the town's angry mob off their trail. He agrees and begins to drool over his sudden fortune when the posse comes ‘round the bend. Anxiously they ask, “Which way’d they go?” The young man puts on his best “I saw it all” face and says, “They went that-a-way”, pointing in the proper direction all right, but then adds loudly as they begin to head off, “Then they turned up 8th street!”, knowing full well that they had turned further down at tenth street (doing his newfound job with greater deception than even the crooks had perhaps bargained for).

You see, if he had pointed in the complete opposite direction (as most would) the posse would not have believed him, as they had already figured out which general direction they had gone but not the exact street that they were last seen on. Being in agreement with the same initial general direction therefore, gives this co-conspirator the credibility that he needs, to successfully send them elsewhere. The young entrepreneur then only has to keep them from actually “catching up to them”, even if sending them just mere steps behind them day in and day out.

Each time the crooks would make it to the next advancing street, and the next, and so forth, the town’s posse would then again find nothing at the last street that they had been foolishly sent to and come back to their “helpful news source” for any new information on where the thugs may have now been seen, not realizing that they were being intentionally kept just a mere two or three blocks just behind them with each new “investigative scoop”. —Have we Americans become that pitifully gullible?

Now, the kid knows that some of the more alert townfolk have caught on to where the crooks are really headed, and even while such information is already spreading among a more observant minority, the kid waits until the crooks are safely out of those ranges to then yell out this “new information”, all the while knowing that this too, is “old hat” but “they don’t know that”, so its released as a ‘news flash’ to further bolster his “on top of it” image.

Over time, the crooks eventually get completely away, the kid laughs all the way to the next town’s bank, and the now impoverished townfolk are so depleted of much-needed resources to continue the posse’s chase, that they are forced to admit defeat and return home tired, dejected and in poor health.

Now, back to reality: Glenn Beck has basically ‘taken over’ for guys like Limbaugh and others, as wiser listeners were starting to catch on that Rush wasn’t telling them the whole story, knowing that things just weren’t fitting with all that he was telling them, etc, where ‘new blood’ had to be brought in as someone that people might again trust as the new “short-pointer” for this gang of escaping villains.

Think about it. What do the crooks care, if the angry townfolk are always just a few blocks behind them, nearly catching up to them, so long as they never really do, completely catch up? In fact, I can’t help but feel that some of these elitist egomaniacs get some kind of ‘kick’ in teasing the more gullible of our land as they lead them on wild goose chases, and in such pathetic carrot-on-a-stick tormenting ways, that I easily envision them laughing sickly at the way these heartless hosts are duping America’s “dumbed-down” masses into a joint-ridicule of folks raising genuine questions and concerns. For example, in the Dave VonKleist documentary “9-11 Ripple Effect”, one can clearly witness Glen Beck’s inexcusable television mimicry of Mr. VonKleist.

Always pointing therefore, just short of where the crooks really went, the town posse would never truly catch up to the bad guys, and would eventually be so defeated, that the crooks could then even come back with their own (better-paid) ‘lawmen’ (and even unqualified justices now, etc) and take over the town for even more control and pillaging, thus finishing them off and taking over for good!

Well there you have it. My five-minute picture of big-dog media as cooperating criminal accomplices.

Sharks like Glen Beck will definitely forever keep you “hot on the trail” alright, so long as you don’t mind being a year to ten years or so behind on the important issues! We therefore my friends, have to look ahead of sell-outs like Quinn, Beck & others to see through this cloak of secrecy, as much of their “news” is routinely what the smaller, new alternative sources knew long ago. Beck only brings things up as he’s forced to when it’s unstoppably coming out en mass anyway via the fast-growing alternative venues. We’ve got to see these high-paid hucksters for what they really are, and with our greatest repentant hearts as a nation, ask the Father to help us convict every single one of these elitist crooks and their accomplices!
