

Cleaning up our room.

1 message

Dwaine Moore <dwaine@bcmin.us>

Sun, Sep 1, 2019 at 12:07 PM

To: Dwaine Moore <dwaine@bcmin.us>

Brethren,

An encouraging "Hi everyone!" is what I'd like to convey today, as I give the more motivated of you more food for thought on the irresponsible nature of our friends who won't join us in returning to Father's instruction for our lives.

And in a way that is just what it sounds already, its a message regarding the family-oriented way that our heavenly Father tries to give us examples for our own cooperative ways in His designed framework of social harmony. It comes of a deep sorrow in my heart for those of you who are working hard towards your own reforms and yet have friends who are not yet willing to join us, that I want to offer another illuatrative tool for here.

When we were children, many of us had siblings and know what its like when the parent comes into our room and finds everything a shambles, and bellows out the order, "Clean up your room!" Well, do we remember the feeling we had? It was a sudden loss of joy, replaced by an anguishing heavy burden that we were not ready for, right?

And some of us, liking to get the uncomfortable things out of the way so that we don't get even more uncomfortable (like a spanking, know what I mean?) ...would start tidying up our part of the room right away, respecting the power and authority of our parents, while other siblings might have just somewhat ignored the order, going right back to what they were playing with the moment the parent again left the room.

Well, this is a lot like what we see in many of the children of our heavenly Father today, is it not? How many of us have friends that expect us to not just clean up our own side of the room, but they even want us to somehow stick up for them when they don't want to clean up their side of the room, as we know that when the parent comes back, the anger towards the unheeded command often brings punishment in an overall sense, the anger falling on the whole lot of us.

In America right now, and I am speaking of a nation calling itself "Christian" by the way, we have very few who, even though they know that Father is getting furious with the whole lot of us, still wont help us clean up our room.

Many of you on this email list know the feeling. We are not only making our parts of the room as spic and span as we know how, but are even begging the other brothers and sisters that are still playing with the toys and still splashing in the mud puddles, to get cleaned up a bit. --yet its as if they have totally tuned us out altogether, is it not? They are so wrapped up in their toys and mud puddles today, that they have essentially made up their minds that our warnings of Father's coming wrath will not affect them. ...as if He has no idea who is trying and who is not, having left the room some 2,000 years ago, know what I mean? They even get angry with us that we have cleaned our sides upto too much, making their side look even worse by comparison. Does this not paint a simplified overall picture for us?

Those professing believers who are refusing to reform themselves back to a purity of the Father's standards of wholesomeness, are then forcing us to try and work even harder ourselves, as we desperately argue against their larger numbers everyday, trying to convince them to help us. In the meantime, they are still helping Caesar and the pope in many ways of various support and solidarity, helping to give their beast kingdom (the parent's paddle, if I might suggest here) more and more strength behind it to persecute us all the more when this whip comes down on our whole nation.

Now Moses was able to make atonement for the sins of his time's multitudes of wandering Israel (see Exodus ch 32), but he apparently had some respect of the Father by which he was able to do this. Today we have no individual as Moses to make atonement for us and curb YHWH's coming wrath, and so all who are yet dancing around today's golden calf are NOT the ones who are merely "staying out of it" (as they say), but are actually the ones most guilty of bringing the Father's wrath down on the rest of us, including perhaps, those of us who are already cleaning up our act.

So, because we love not just our families but even these very same friends of ours who refuse to help us, we work even harder, many of us doing the work of several people, trying to make up for the kids that won't help us clean up the room.

Yet as we know that time is running out for us to repent before it's too late, we still keep trying to help awaken even those who still get angry, gnashing their teeth at us, and now they gnash at us because our part of the room has little left for them to point condemning fingers at, removing their excuses to "stay out of it"! They're not fearful of the Father, but fearful of losing their much loved toys and mud puddles.

The simple phrase, "I wanna stay out of it" (as I've had literally thousands say to me over the years) is what we used to call "a cop out" back in the 70's. Because since there is no middle ground between YHWH and satan, and no place for moderates to go when they die, it's just a way to say, "I wanna stay lukewarm", is it not?

We are either wearing a clean wedding garment, or we are not. We cannot serve both our parents and the mud puddles.

A little shorter this time, but a good way to illustrate what is taking place in this world, agreed?

I have also begun the arduous task of turning the "KING of kings" broadcasts into youtubes. Father willing and He extend my stay a bit longer, I am first "re-mastering" them for higher audio quality and to also remove many moments of unnecessary chit chat, adding images and Scripture text etc, so that they can be uploaded to youtube and/or put on video disc of some form. This, because I have run out of resources to upload them as simple audios via my previous hosting server. Yet, it should work out better this way anyhow the long run.

In my love for all of you, through the love He first shared with me, dwaine